YOUNG MEN

There are in every large town and city certain idle men, technically known as "mashers," who spend a good portion of their lives in idling women as they pass along the streets. As a rule, the fellow that looks straight ahead and goes about his business will not be molested. Those chiefly exposed are the giddy, even though well-intentioned, young women who have little or nothing else to do, or, if they have, neglect it and go sauntering idly up and down the highways, heedless of their behavior. Sometimes, however, the "masher" is impudent and unrepentable, in which case the tact and wit of a young woman on her way to a railway station in Cincinnati are very commendable. She was accosted by a dapper, dandified fellow, who, stepping up to her, asked if he might carry her portmanteau. She looked at him a moment and handing it to him, said "certainly, certainly." He took it and tipped a wink to his loitering friends, who followed him to the station. He tried to enter into conversation with her, but she made no reply. Arriving at the station, to his consternation, she took out her pocket-book and, handing him ten cents, seized her and boarded the cars. It would have been creditable to him if he had set himself to work after that to earn his living from day to day as honestly as he earned his dime on the walk to the station. Detroit Free Press.

FACTS AND FIGURES.
—The printing-offices of the New Free Press at Vienna are now lighted with Siemens' divided electric lamps.
—It is claimed in South Carolina that cotton can be manufactured there at a cost of a cent and a quarter per pound less than in New England.
—It is said that German workmen give a new temper to their edge-tools by simply heating them to a white heat and plunging them repeatedly into sealing-wax, so that finally the tool is too cool to penetrate the wax.
—By means of the electric clocks now in position along the Hudson River Railroad, an operator in New York controls the hands of each clock without the intervention of the men connected with the depot. For a moment before noon the hands of each clock are agitated and stop exactly at the same instant.
—Mr. Trowbridge, our Consul at Vera Cruz, has called attention to a caecus known as a "pita," with fibers sixteen feet long, and capable of being spun to an incredible fineness. The fabric woven from these fibers appears like silver tissue of wonderful delicacy. The plant flourishes both in Mexico and Texas in great abundance.
—In a recent note to the Vienna Academy, Herr Salzer offers an estimate (based on numeration) of the probable number of optic nerve fibers and of retinal cones in a human eye. The number of the former he supposes to be about 438,000, that of the latter 3,360,000. This gives seven or eight cones for each nerve fiber, supposing all fibers of the optic nerves to be connected with cones, and equally distributed among them.
—The Ames Company at Chicopee, Mass., a concern which needs skilled and intelligent workmen, is trying to bring about a return to the old apprentice system by their employees. In view of the present scarcity of thoroughly competent mechanics, other concerns are adopting such a course, and, with the demand for skilled labor in that line, the boys who have the patience and nerve to learn the business thoroughly will be sure of better wages ultimately than the present system can ever secure them.
—The shortest curve in the world is on the Knoxville branch of the Louisville and Nashville Road. The gauge is three feet, and a part of the grade is 200 feet to the mile; but the most remarkable feature is a curve, which is on the scale of 100 degrees. While the engine is moving in one direction, the rear cars are moving in exactly the opposite direction. The engine is a perfect little toy, and with a long train of about seventy-five loaded cars, or ninety to one hundred empty cars, it resembles a gigantic serpent crawling gracefully but rapidly among the trees and houses along the way.
—In 1840 the finest ocean steamers plying between this country and England burned 5,291 pounds of coal for each ton of paying freight, the speed at that time considered fast, being 8½ knots per hour. At the present day the first-class steamers burn only 551 pounds of coal per ton of freight carried, and realize a speed of 15½ knots per hour. But, although our present steamers are making very fast time by and are very economical in fuel, it is still a lamentable fact that on the largest and finest of them, furnished with all the latest improvements to secure economy, we can only succeed in putting into the steam about one-tenth of the heat realized in the boiler fire, and the remaining nine-tenths are lost.
There are in every large town and city certain idle men, technically known as "mashers," who spend a good portion of their lives in idling women as they pass along the streets. As a rule, the fellow that looks straight ahead and goes about his business will not be molested. Those chiefly exposed are the giddy, even though well-intentioned, young women who have little or nothing else to do, or, if they have, neglect it and go sauntering idly up and down the highways, heedless of their behavior. REWARD OF PERSISTENCE.
Henry Clemente writes: "For a long time I was troubled with Chronic Rheumatism, at times wholly disabled. I tried anything and everything recommended, but failed to get any benefit until a gentleman who was cured of Rheumatism by Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil told me about it. I began using it both internally and externally, and before two bottles were used I was radically cured. We find it a household medicine, and for Croup, Burns, Cuts, and Bruises, it has no equal." The Holyoke Snake Story.
Dr. Mativer tells the story of a remarkable escape from the effects of a rattlesnake's bite. One day last week a young Frenchman named Ferdinand Ruel, of this city, came to the doctor and showed him a sore finger, which he said had been bitten by a rattlesnake. The doctor treated it, and although the hand was swollen to a great size the next day, no more serious effects were felt, and the man is now almost well. But the action which saved his life was taken long before he found a doctor. Ruel's father-in-law, an old resident named Prunier, is a professional snake catcher, and the two went out together on the day in question. The Mr. Tom region is the usual hunting ground for rattlesnakes, but this day they did not seem to be very plenty, and about noon the men prepared to take their lunch, camping down beside a brook. Ruel sat upon a stone and happened to put his hand down to the ground a young rattlesnake, without the slightest warning, reached out his head from under the stone and grabbed the little finger of Ruel, clamping so tight that he had to be fairly shaken off. Prunier, who always goes prepared for such emergencies, was very prompt in his measures. He first tied a cord around the finger below the wounds, drawing it very tight, regardless of the pain occasioned, then sucked the poison out with his mouth as thoroughly as possible, the blood which followed profusely being almost black, and finally applied a strong spirit of ammonia. After a while he loosened the string a little at a time, so as to let what poison still remained in the finger into the system so slowly that it could be absorbed. These precautions doubtless saved the young man's life, and it is worth knowing just how to go to work in such cases. The snake was afterward captured alive. Prunier says he once saw a woman die in twenty-five minutes of a rattlesnake bite, probably before he had learned to work so promptly. This man has been in the business some time, selling the snakes to collectors and natural-history museums. He always draws the poison fangs as soon as the animals are captured, so that they are no longer dangerous, but even then they would not be considered very agreeable playthings in a family. Prunier's wife, however, seems to have a good deal less than the natural dread of such things, if the story he tells of her is true. He had fourteen live rattlesnakes on hand at one time, and kept them in a large box in the room where he and his wife slept. One night while he was away from home the whole menagerie got loose and the woman was awakened by feeling the frightful animals crawling over her. She sensed the situation at once, but kept her presence of mind in a remarkable manner. Instead of rushing for the first door and fleeing from the house, to be followed by the venomous but otherwise healthy snakes, as almost any mortal woman or man either would have done, she was more mindful of her husband's property, and determined to recapture it. Striking a light, she got possession of the big wooden tongs which her husband used in his profession, and then for two hours, clothed in the flowing robes of night, she had a circus all by herself, succeeding, before the curtain fell, in bagging every serpent of them. Since that night Mrs. Prunier has insisted on making the woodshed do service as a zoological garden rather than her sleeping apartment. Holyoke (Mass.) Cor. Springfield Republican.

Pain in the Back, resulting from strain, spinal affection, overwork, or disorder of the kidneys, yields to the remarkable strengthening powers of DAY'S KIDNEY PAD.

Instruction and Suicide.
Professions do not predispose to suicide, but instruction does. No man kills himself because of his trade, but a good many men kill themselves because of their knowledge. Not only has the revival of suicide almost exactly coincided, in time, with the modern extension of schooling, but suicide is now most abundant, in place, in the very regions in which schooling is most expanded. The records establish this beyond all doubt. The inhabitants of countries in which every one can read are precisely those who kill themselves the most. Now this supplies another indication that persons do not always make a good use of reading. We know that fact already, it is true, but we scarcely expected that additional proof of it would be supplied in this strange form. That reading conduces to suicide is a new view of reading, but it is incontestably an exact one—within limits. We could, perhaps, have imagined, if we had thought about the matter at all, that certain occupations might possibly pave the way, under favorable circumstances of health, to thoughts of suicide. We could have wildly guessed, for instance, that newly-enlisted recruits, or light-house keepers, or exiles, or public executioners lead lives in which the self-killing tendency might receive a morbid development; but never, in our senses, should we suppose that village schooling, indirectly, the most fertile of all the actual origins of suicide. And yet it seems to be so. And if it is not, what is? We have all of us heard so much of "the suppression of crime by education" that we have unconsciously acquired the erroneous belief that education is the one natural cure for moral evils. So, perhaps, it ought to be. And to repeat the question—if it is not, what can be? But evidently, as regards this particular evil, education appears to be provocative rather than a remedy—at least in the form in which we have hitherto applied it. The books which are now being published about suicide on the Continent are all deploring, with consternation, the simultaneity of the spread of the alphabet and of voluntary death, and are asking, anxiously, what can be the connection between them. They seem, indeed, to be almost expecting that, if we go on as we have begun, we shall soon see suicide officially recognized by governments as an inevitable result of study, (like headaches and spectacles), and placed naturally, all over Europe, under the supervision of the inspectors of schools. Blackwood's Magazine.
